(Tips and links for model railroaders and railfans!
Remember past issues are archived on my web site)

Several requests!

- 1) I am looking for a Proto 2000 GP7 or GP9 shell only. CN is my first choice, undecorated is second and painted any other road is third. Anybody got one they are willing to part with??
- 2) "When I retired, the firm gave me a brass Royal Hudson, problem is, it doesn't have the crowns (2851 before crowning). Do you know anybody that has or makes these? Van Hobbies had them years ago but long before I needed any.

DouG "

P. S. Doug is also looking for Royal Canadian Pacific decals.

Lots of video links:

Thanks to Bob Messmer who sends this link: Angus Workshops 1930s --"The Miracle of a Locomotive" (Associated Screen News, 1928)

Witness the birth of locomotive 3101, the most powerful in the Commonwealth, made for the Canadian Pacific Railway's "Angus shops" in Montreal.

Be sure to watch for the St Clair Tunnel sequence before electrification.

From Chuck Faist (and Lex):

Lex Parker has put 5 new videos on Youtube on the construction of his layout. Lex lives in Beamsville which is about a half hour drive north of Niagara Falls. His layout is one of the best in the area. Lex is a NMRA MMR.

This video is a general description of his methods. Hope you enjoy it and get a few ideas from it.

From Derek Boles and ToRyHeritage@yahoogroups.com

On January 17, 1985, Ontario Premier Bill Davis announces a new domed stadium to be built on land donated by Canadian National Railway adjacent to the CN Tower. Other sites that were considered included Downsview Airport, Woodbine Race Track and the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

The downtown site was chosen because of its proximity to public transit and the availability of underground parking garages in downtown office towers that were normally empty during evenings and weekends. The stadium was also seen as a stimulus for the commercial redevelopment of the railway lands, which had been stalled since the cancellation of the Metro Centre project ten years earlier.

As well, the stadium could provide extra space for the already overtaxed Metro Toronto Convention Centre that had opened in 1984. Construction costs of the new stadium were estimated at $150 million and required the demolition of CN's Spadina Roundhouse and the relocation of the city water pumping station. 1989 opening cost was $570 million.
